THE OTTAWA HOSPITAL FOUNDATION 2011–2012 ANNUAL REPORT
CONSTANT. INNOVATION.

CONSTANT. INNOVATION.

Innovation is a constant at The Ottawa Hospital. Prostate cancer patients are now undergoing surgery by robot. Researchers are working to regenerate stem cells to rebuild a damaged spinal cord or brain. Every member of the Hospital team uses innovation to improve patient care and research.

Innovation is also a constant at The Ottawa Hospital Foundation. Recognizing the incredible 10-year success of the President's Breakfast, we launched the President's Breakfast for the Public Service in May. Eager to harness the power of social media, we organized a flash mob to draw attention to our White Coat Challenge in September.

While innovation is crucial in health care, it is only a worthwhile pursuit for the Foundation if it enables us to support the Hospital. And that's where the constant comes in. Your constant support is why the Hospital is able to be innovative with its care of patients and dedication to research. The community contributed the full $5 million needed to purchase the da Vinci surgical robot, which is improving the experience of prostate cancer patients. That same community is rallying around regenerative medicine to fund tomorrow's health care today at the Ottawa Hospital Research Institute.

We at the Foundation are so grateful to you for constantly including the Hospital among your philanthropic priorities. And you have told us that one of the reasons you continue to support the work of the Foundation is because we provide constant transparency. We work diligently to bestow genuine assurance that your funds are benefitting the projects and efforts you intended them to support.

As you will see in the pages of this annual report, we take pride in showcasing your philanthropy as well as its accomplishments. Whether it is saying thank you with a tour of the Centre for Innovative Cancer Research or naming an area of the Hospital in your honour, we constantly revel in the opportunity to show our gratitude. It is because of you that we can all be excited about the year gone by and the years to come.

Innovation will continue to inspire us, and you can count on us to focus our constant effort on supporting improvements at the Hospital. It is my pleasure to thank you for your support.

Constant. Innovation. Together, the possibilities are endless.

Sincerely,

10TH ANNIVERSARY PRESIDENT'S BREAKFAST

In September, the 10th anniversary President's Breakfast was attended by more than 600 community and business leaders. Co-Chairs Jim Durrell, owner of Capital Dodge Chrysler Jeep Fiat Ltd., and Sandy Goldberg, Partner, Tax Services, Ernst and Young LLP (pictured above), were thrilled to announce the event raised almost $1.6 million, bringing the 10-year total to more than $6 million. The format of the annual event is simple—patients provide testimonials and Dr. Jack Kitts, President and CEO of The Ottawa Hospital, outlines his vision for the Hospital—but the effect is profound. Dr. Don Chow, for example, is an orthopedic surgeon at the Hospital who became a trauma patient following a collision that threw him 30-feet off his motorcycle. His compelling story of recovery and rehabilitation is just one of the reasons the one-hour event is so inspiring for the community.

“My cancer treatment inspired me to volunteer, and I am grateful to all those who made the first President's Breakfast for the Public Service an outstanding success.”

FOR THE PUBLIC SERVICE

PRESIDENT'S BREAKFAST FOR THE PUBLIC SERVICE

The inaugural President's Breakfast for the Public Service took place in May and gathered together more than 375 leaders from the public service to be inspired by the story of The Ottawa Hospital and its patients.

“There is no doubt in my mind that The Ottawa Hospital is a critical public institution, and I personally believe that, above and beyond the work that we do as federal public servants every day, we have a great deal to contribute to our community,” said Wayne Wouters, Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet (pictured below with Dr. Jack Kitts, Susan Cartwright and Jean-Pierre Blais), during his opening remarks.

Bushra Saeed (pictured bottom left) was among the three testimonial speakers during the one-hour event. She recounted her story of recovery and rehabilitation at the Hospital following a horrific accident that took place during her Foreign Service posting in Kandahar, Afghanistan. In addition to testimonials from patients, Dr. Kitts, President and CEO of the Hospital, shared his vision of world-class care for the community.

Chair Susan Cartwright, Senior Advisor, Privy Council Office, co-hosted the event with Jean-Pierre Blais, Assistant Secretary, Government Operations Sector, Treasury Board of Canada Secretariat. They were delighted to announce the event raised $326,000 for patient care and research at the Hospital.

A number of Run for a Reason supporters were honoured at the event, which featured a trade show and mock trauma coordinated by Dr. Janet Nuth from Emergency Medicine (right).
2. Foundation supporters, such as Lynda Ansell (left), were among the first to tour the Centre for Innovative Cancer Research in May and learn more about clinical trials and lab techniques from researchers, including Natalie Andrews (right).
3. Dr. Glenwood Goss, Medical Director of Clinical and Translational Research at The Ottawa Hospital Cancer Centre (centre), explains the CyberKnife to RBC associates in January during an exclusive tour in advance of their workplace campaign in support of the White Coat Challenge.
4. Joan Robertson was among members and supporters of Partners Investing in Parkinson Research (PIPR) who toured the Parkinson's research lab in December. PIPR has donated more than $500,000 to Parkinson's research at the Hospital and has pledged an additional $500,000.

THE DA VINCI SURGICAL ROBOT

Thanks to the efforts of a group of community leaders, the da Vinci surgical robot is now a reality at The Ottawa Hospital. These dedicated volunteers reached out to their colleagues and the community to raise $5 million to purchase this surgical system.

Support for purchasing da Vinci was drawn from inside the Hospital and out. Dr. Rodney Breau, Surgical Oncologist in the Division of Urology (pictured above), spoke at numerous information sessions to highlight the benefits of da Vinci for patients, particularly prostate cancer patients. Robotic-assisted surgery contributes to better outcomes by facilitating less blood loss, less post-operative pain, smaller incisions, shorter hospital stays and faster recoveries—the results for which every patient hopes.

RIDE THE RIDEAU

The second annual Ride the Rideau, fuelled by Nordion, took place on a gloriously sunny September day and featured a scenic 100 km route from Ottawa to Merrickville-Wolford. The more than 715 participants raised $1,829,544 for cancer research at The Ottawa Hospital. Funds supported a number of cancer research initiatives, including clinical trials and the development of novel targeted therapies. Ride the Rideau attracted riders and supporters from all walks of life, including Mike Tierney from the Hospital's Senior Management Team (pictured below). Business leaders, such as Ride the Rideau champions Robert Merkley of Merkley Supply Ltd. and Claude Des Rosiers of Boone Plumbing, rallied their employees and colleagues to participate in what has become Eastern Ontario's largest single-day cancer fundraiser.

“ I travelled to the U.S. to take advantage of da Vinci because it wasn't yet available here, and then I wanted this incredible surgical system in Ottawa so everyone who needs it has access to it. ”

Cancer Research Takes Flight Thanks to

The Ottawa Hospital Foundation celebrates NAV CANADA and its employees for raising $1,049,000 in just four years to support cancer care and research at The Ottawa Hospital. Their dedication and commitment has made a profound impact on the care cancer patients will receive in our community.

On behalf of The Ottawa Hospital and the thousands of patients whose lives will be touched by the generosity of NAV CANADA, thank you!

LEAVING A LEGACY

In April, relatives of James and Fleurette Andrews were invited to see the Quiet Room at the Emergency Department at the General Campus. The room was named in honour of the couple in recognition of their generous estate gift to the Foundation. James and Fleurette were married for more than 50 years and together chose to benefit a select group of charities through their estate plans. Among the three charities was the Hospital, where James had received treatments for a kidney disorder. "His philosophy was to focus their giving on those whom he felt needed it most," says Fleurette's sister, Pauline Sabourin (pictured above, far right). Just as their thoughtful gift will provide for the health of future generations, planning an estate gift contributes to improvements at the Hospital.

WHITE COAT CAMPAIGN

Employees from workplaces across Ottawa make a difference in the lives of patients at the Hospital. From patient care at the Cancer Centre and Emergency Department at the General Campus to research at the Ottawa Hospital Research Institute and Centre for Innovative Cancer Research, the Foundation is grateful to these employees for their support of the medical professionals who wear the white coats every day.

In September, employees from seven local companies joined Hospital staff in a flash mob (pictured above) at the St. Laurent Centre to raise awareness and funds to equip a chemotherapy bay. Much to the surprise of food court patrons, more than 60 dancers jived and grooved to the classic '70s hit Bad Case of Loving You (Doctor, Doctor). Their efforts were honoured in March with a celebration, which was attended by employees of the workplaces as well as Dave Allum, Senior Vice-President, Growth and Strategy, Innovapost, (pictured bottom right) with Tim Kluge, President and CEO of the Foundation, Cindy McLennan, Clinical Manager Systemic Therapy, The Ottawa Hospital Cancer Centre, and Heather McLean, Vice-President, Annual Giving Programs at the Foundation.

Overall, workplace campaigns raised more than $702,000 through employee donations, corporate matches and events to fund improvements and purchase equipment. The Foundation is thankful for their support and impressed with the creativity the workplaces apply to fundraising. Thermo Fisher Scientific, for example, hosted the second annual Amazing Race to Cure Cancer (pictured top right), during which 100 race participants and 40 dedicated volunteers competed in challenges while raising money for cancer research.

Even though I was a passionate supporter of the Hospital through my workplace, our fundraising efforts became more meaningful this year when I went from donor to patient. My treatment has been world class.

- Each runner participating in Run for a Reason during Ottawa Race Weekend in May has his or her own reason to support The Ottawa Hospital. The Pancreatic Cancer Purple Team, which included (from left) Sharon Beal, Christina Walker and Debbie and Scott McLeod, raised almost $26,000 in support of cancer research.
- Halloween-costumed runners and walkers were among the more than 2,400 participants in the 18th edition of Rattle Me Bones in October. The annual event, which includes a 1 K, 5 K and 10 K run/walk, raised $87,232 for patient care and arthritis and orthopedic research at The Ottawa Hospital.
- In February, the Little Angels Team led by longtime supporter and cancer survivor Evelyn Stone raised more than $21,000 at the 2012 Gatineau Loppet. To date, this enthusiastic group has raised more than $191,000 for the Little Angels Blood Cancer Fund at The Ottawa Hospital.
- Anna Doherty (third from left) was one of two Ottawa Hospital staff to take home $10,000 in the Cash Cow Giveaway in October. Angela Ross took home the other cash prize. Proceeds from the staff lottery support patient care and research.

LOOKING AHEAD

Constant innovation means always looking ahead to realize a vision. Our role at the Foundation is to honour the Hospital's vision by inspiring and enabling the community to help make it happen. The Foundation launched a number of campaigns this year. With your support, these will fund innovation well into the future.

Establishing SABR Research Chair

In July, the Foundation launched a $1 million campaign to support a Spine and Brain Regeneration (SABR) Research Chair. The Chair will allow Dr. Eve Tsai, a neurosurgeon and associate scientist, to harness regenerative medicine to one day repair or replace damaged tissue in the spinal cord and brain. In November, Dr. Tsai appeared on the cover of Women of Influence magazine (pictured bottom left), in which she was recognized as one of Canada's top 25 Women of Influence in the health category.

Expanding Breast Health Centre

To better serve patients, breast health services at the Hospital will be expanded and consolidated with one Breast Health Centre at the General Campus. This exciting expansion means—just to name a few of the improvements—the number of consultation and examination rooms will more than double and capacity for diagnostic imaging will increase. To help turn this vision into a reality, the Foundation launched a multi-year fundraising campaign in September.

Funding Cancer Research

In January, Steve West (pictured top left), CEO of Nordion Inc. and a Foundation Board member, rang the ceremonial victory bell in the Chemotherapy Unit of the Cancer Centre to mark the end of his treatments. Steve has been an enthusiastic supporter of Ride the Rideau, Eastern Ontario's largest single-day cancer fundraiser. In addition to confirming that Nordion will return as the Sept. 8, 2012, event's title sponsor, Steve announced the fundraising goal for his company is $70,000, and Steve personally pledged to raise half of that extraordinary goal.

“The wonderful financial support from the Kathleen Elizabeth Ward Endowment Fund was ever so helpful. Every day I see the rewards of my studies in the enhanced care I am able to provide patients.”

THE OTTAWA HOSPITAL GALA

More than 550 of Ottawa's elite filled the Westin Ottawa in November to celebrate the outstanding achievements of three researchers at the Ottawa Hospital Research Institute (OHRI). Dr. Jean-Simon Diallo, Dr. Rashmi Kothary and Dr. Shawn Aaron (pictured above, from left), were honoured for their research in cancer vaccines, neuromuscular disease and lung diseases, respectively. “The researchers are truly pushing the bounds of medical science and making an impact around the world,” said Dr. Duncan Stewart, CEO and Scientific Director of the OHRI.
